Theme
 A fundamental change in the practice governing the design of streets and spaces is underway in Britain and elsewhere. Europe is trying to change the rules and the way of thinking about urban highway and public spaces. As governments and communities worldwide, we are trying to understand the public realm, we often find ourselves in the need to reconcile the need to accommodate the needs of the public realm with the need to accommodate the needs of the private realm. This is a challenge that is being met in many ways. This seminar will explore the challenges and opportunities of shared space and how it can be used to create a more vibrant and sustainable public realm. The seminar will be held in the afternoon and will be followed by a reception and drinks. The seminar is free of charge and open to all members of the public. The seminar will be held in the afternoon and will be followed by a reception and drinks. The seminar is free of charge and open to all members of the public.

About the speaker
 Ben Hamilton Ballie is the leading exponent of integrated urban design in the UK. He has worked for the government, private and public sector in a number of capacities. He has worked on a wide range of projects, including the regeneration of urban areas, the design of new housing, and the design of public spaces. He has also worked on a number of international projects, including the design of public spaces in the Middle East and Africa. He is a frequent speaker at conferences and seminars, and has written a number of books and articles on urban design and public spaces.

Registration
 The seminar will be on first come first served basis.
